

By Alison Snyder · Jun 01, 2017

Something wondrous

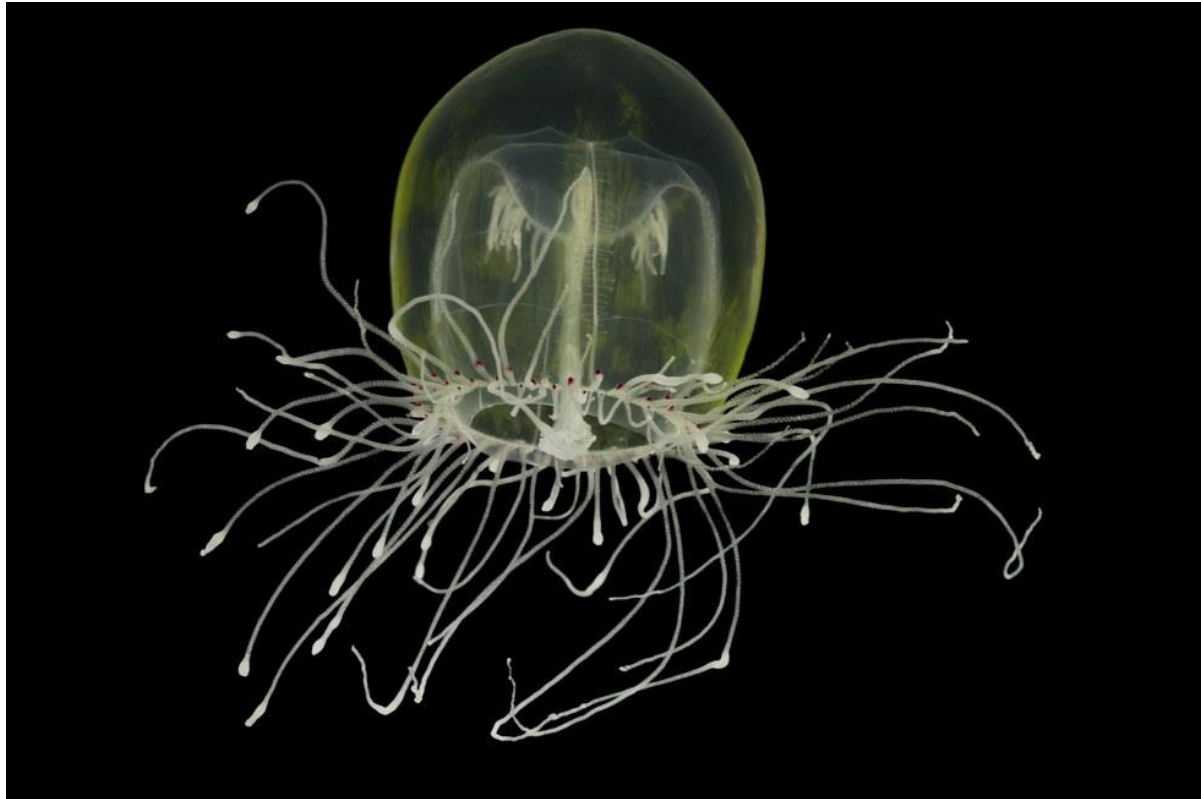

Image courtesy of Susan Middleton

Speaking of soft and flexible, marine invertebrates that make up nearly 98% of animal species in the ocean are models for roboticists. This image of the red-eyed Medusa — typically just an inch long — was taken by the California Academy of Science's Susan Middleton and is part of Spineless, an exhibition at the National Academy of Sciences in D.C.

